SCOUT FUND CAMPAIGN WILL BE LAUNCHED MONDAY IN TOWNSHIP

Support Of Public Is Urged For Annual Drive Here

The annual drive for funds necessary to carry on the work of the Boy Scouts in Washington township will begin Monday morning, with the goal set at $930 for the district.

During this year, scout officials say, one boy of every four of scout age in the south county was a scout. It is to support the organization that makes scout work possible for these boys that the drive for financial support is launched each year.

To establish an equitable basis for financing scout activities, a meeting was held in Hayward last February which was attended by representatives of every district in the southern division. Washington township was placed third on the budget.

District chairman of the local drive is Dr. G. S. Holeman, of Centerville. E. Dixon Bristow will be Niles chairman; Tom Silva will have charge of the Centerville drive; R. L. Pond, is Irvington chairman and E. Frick and Mrs. Lena Bertolotti, in charge of the Newark drive.

In order to facilitate the collection this time, it was decided to abandon the house to house canvass, and substitute a plan whereby a captain is appointed in each organization and industry to be responsible for the members of such organizations. It is thought that considerable work will be obviated in this way.

Of the funds collected, 34 per cent go to field services, 25 per cent to office expenditures, 13 per cent for taxes and operating costs, and the remainder divided for campaign expenses, national support, scout activities and transportation.

SUICIDE FOUND BY NILES MEN NEAR ALVISO MONDAY

Driving near Alviso, on their way to work at Sunnyvale early Monday morning, Lawrence and Clarence Pine, brothers, George Mederios and Gus Andrade, all of Niles, discovered the body of an elderly man lying beside the road.

According to Lawrence Pine, they passed the corpse, thinking at first that it was a sleeping itinerant. The awkward position in which it lay, however, caused them to turn back. Investigation disclosed a pistol in the dead man's hand and a wound in the head. The boys notified the Santa Clara county sheriff's office and continued on to work. The corpse, well dressed, proved to be that of a wealthy San Francisco man. Police concluded death was by suicide.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Mrs. H. E. Mosher, elderly Niles woman, was taken to the Hayward hospital yesterday. Mrs. Mosher became seriously ill early this week.

FIREMEN RESCUE FORGOTTEN GUNS

Niles First street has acquired an adornment in the form of two ferocious-looking field guns, one aimed in the general direction of Alvarado, the other pointing its sombre snout at Irvington. Neither of the above cities need be uneasy—the guns are encrusted with a dignified rust.

It's a sort of resurrection for the cannon, thanks to the Niles firemen, after years as obscure school yard ornaments, years during which children clambered and aimed and played soldier.

The guns were brought to Niles originally from the Benecia arsenal by Fred Mitte. That was in 1920. They were placed in front of the school and later dragged to the rear of the school yard, where they remained, almost forgotten, until disturbed by renovations this fall. The Niles firemen, fearful lest the guns be lost, dragged them to the firehouse, where they squat, reminiscent.

NORRIS - LOGAN BETROTHAL TOLD AT SMART AFFAIR

Engagement Revealed At Bridge-Luncheon In Oakland

Important in the social realm of Washington township last week was the announcement of the betrothal of Miss Clarabelle Logan, of Alvarado, and Allen G. Norris, Centerville, at a smart bridge-luncheon given at the Hotel Lake Merritt, Oakland, Saturday afternoon by Mrs. J. V. Goold, sister of the bride-elect.

Miss Logan is the daughter of Mrs. Rebecca J. Logan and the late James Logan, of Alvarado. She was schooled locally and is widely acquainted in the south county. She is at present secretary at the California Pottery plant, at Niles.

Norris, prominent jurist in this region, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Norris, of Centerville. He has been a judge in Centerville for eight years. Norris is a graduate of the University of California with the class of 1923.

The wedding date will be sometime in November.

Flurry Of Rain Scares Tomato Growers Tuesday

Tomato growers, in the midst of their harvest, were worried, and cauliflower planters cheerful Tuesday, when high clouds opened and splashed heavy drops over Washington township.

The rain was of short duration, scarcely wetting down the dust. Damage to the tomato crop would have been heavy had the storm been severe.

The first day of Autumn will roll over the eastern horizon Sunday morning. The autumnal equinox, when the sun crosses the equator on its southward journey, will be on that day.

105 AT COUNTRY CLUB LUNCHEON AT CENTERVILLE

Event Will Be Noted In Annals Of Club As Outstanding

One hundred and five members and guests participated in the interesting and colorful occasion which marked the beginning of the fall activities of the Country Club of Washington Township, Thursday afternoon.

The new president, Mrs. F. T. Dusterberry, opened the program with a charmingly delivered speech, cleverly weaving into the word, "Welcome," the substance and ideals of Clubdom; women, enthusiasm, loyalty, courage, obedience, memory, and earnestness. Mrs. Dusterberry stressed the thought that friendliness, not cold formality, must take first place in club associations. Her own enthusiasm and earnestness created a happy spirit that will, undoubtedly, continue throughout a successful and enjoyable year.

Following Mrs. Dusterberry's talk, corsages were given to the guests of honor by Margaret Moore Boyer who was a picture of old-fashioned grace as she sang, "My Old-fashioned Garden."

Mrs. E. D. Bristow, chairman of music, presented Mrs. W. C. Nichols, of the Oakland Conservatory of Music, who in turn introduced Mrs. Alice Trout Lucas, contralto, and Miss Virginia Scurry, pianist. Mrs. Lucas sang

JOSEPH GUZMAN, CENTENARIAN, PASSES AWAY

California Indian Dies At Niles; Was Born Over Century Ago

A resident of Washington township for 102 years, Joseph Guzman, perhaps the oldest native of California in Alameda county, died at his home on the Shinn ranch Sunday.

Guzman, who was born in the Sunol region in 1832, came to Niles only a few years ago. His sons, who have worked in this district for many years, are well-known.

The deceased was a member of the Costanoan tribe, known in Washington township as the "Diggers." He remembered the early days when his people traded with the Miwok tribe, which occupied the upper San Joaquin valley.

Guzman's death takes another from the sparse ranks of the true Californians, whose numbers melted away when the Spanish came.

Funeral was Wednesday from the Guzman home, thence to the Corpus Christi church, Niles, where mass was celebrated. Interment was in the Holy Ghost cemetery at Centerville. Funeral was under the direction of the Pratt Mortuary, of Hayward.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martin entertained the Community Card club at their home in Niles last Wednesday evening.

Miss Marian Fogg and her pupils enjoyed swimming at Castlewood one day last week.

I.D.E.S. ORDER WILL ACQUIRE CURTNER HOME

Warm Springs Property to Be Home For Aged of Portuguese Order

The historic Curtner ranch at Warm Springs will be purchased by the I. D. E. S. society, Portuguese fraternal and benevolent organization, and converted into a home for aged and destitute members of the order, it was learned late last week upon return of delegates from the society's annual convention at Eureka.

Embracing an area of 1973 acres, the ranch was established in 1867, two years after the civil war ended, by the late Henry Curtner, and is now the home of his son, Arthur D. Curtner who has managed the property since 1900.

The huge 17-room home, built in 1879 by Henry Curtner, is declared admirably adapted for the purpose to which the ranch will be converted.

Prior to the Eureka convention, which was in session from Monday to Thursday last week, directors of the society made a detailed survey of the Curtner and other properties. So favorably were they impressed with the Curtner place that they placed an option on it, pending ratification of the project by convention delegates. There is no question but that the property will be purchased, Carlos R. Freitas, board secretary, is said to have stated.

Of the society's plan for the property, Freitas said:

"The project will be one of gradual development. The idea behind it is to take care of the aged and destitute members of the order. Details of the administration and rules by which the home will be run will be worked out later by the board of directors."

The I. D. E. S. society is a California organization of some 7000 members, divided into 130 subordinate councils in as many cities between Crescent City and San Diego. There are several units of the organization in Washington township.

Although for sentimental reasons Curtner said he was reluctant to dispose of the property, more practical considerations, chiefly that he would be relieved of the not inconsiderable responsibility of managing the ranch, persuaded him to consent to the sale.

The use to which the property will be put, Curtner points out, is not at all inappropriate, since the first Portuguese colony to settle in California was established on the ranch by the elder Curtner shortly after he had acquired the property There were 17 families, mostly families of Portuguese sailors, who had come to the bay area. They were established on the ranch as tenant farmers, and formed the nucleus for the group of prosperous, thrifty Portuguese land owners whose homes dot the southern Alameda county area.

Joseph S. Brown, of Warm Springs, is the retiring grand president of the order, Joe Jason, of Centerville, is active in the organization.

Rebekahs Fete Member With Costume Affair

Mrs. Eliza Kinnard, ill for many months at the home of Mrs. William D. Cull, was tendered a surprise costume party Saturday night by the members of the Niles Rebekah lodge. The affair was held at the Cull home.

All varieties of costumes gave the evening a novel touch. There were fourteen in attendance.

Tony Alves bagged a fine deer last week.

NUNES NAMED ON SANITARY BOARD BY WRITE-IN VOTE

Surprise Ballot Beats R. Peterson By Two Votes Monday

In a surprise write-in campaign, Frank Nunes, of Niles, defeated Ray Peterson, candidate for sanitary district director, at the election held in Niles Monday. Nunes polled 35 votes to Peterson's 33.

Other candidates on the ballot were Leon Vieux, incumbent secretary, who received 58 ballots, and T. Elliot, also incumbent, who was given 59 votes.

Election officials were, Lillian Burr, judge; Mrs. Mary Bernard, inspector, and Helen Oliver, clerk.

Nunes aspiration to the board was comparatively unknown in Niles. His election came as a surprise to many. Heretofore, there has been little interest in the elections, with incumbents polling all of light votes.

BANK BANDIT GETS FIVE YEARS TO LIFE IN SAN QUENTIN

John Dias Sentenced At Superior Court Last Wednesday

Irvington's bank robber, John Dias, 30, who September 1 held up the Bank of Alameda County in that city, listened calmly to the words of Superior Judge Fred V. Wood last Wednesday afternoon, as the jurist pronounced a five years to life sentence for him at the Oakland superior court. The term will be served in San Quentin prison.

Dias appeared before Judge Allen G. Norris, at the Centerfille justice court for arraignment and preliminary hearing on September 7. He waived time, and was bound over to the superior court. He pleaded guilty there last Tuesday.

Dias confessed, it is said, telling how he entered the Irvington bank during the early morning hours and waited for J. A. Blacow, bank manager, to arrive. He forced Blacow to open the vault, then slugged him with a pistol butt and made away with $9350 in cash. His plans for escape to his car, parked several blocks away were thwarted when a freight train formed an unexpected barrier. He hid in the old Irvington grammar school, where he was found by police several hours later.

Dias, it is said, seemed eager to have the trial short. He has no previous record.

CIVIC GROUP VOTES TO RESUME SPONSORSHIP OF SCOUTS AT FIRST MEET

Twenty-Three Present As Chamber Takes Up Reins After Summer Rest

With twenty-three members present at the first meeting since June 25, the Niles Chamber of Commerce started off the fall season with a will Monday when they voted to resume sponsorship of the Niles Boy Scout troop.

President F. V. Jones, in addressing the civic group, stated that he had been communicating with I. P. Beesley, scout field executive, and that the time had come for the body to resume its direction of the local boys. The chamber had terminated its sponsorship last spring, when members of the troops had questioned the authority of the scout committeemen, appointed by the chamber.

Declaring that the troop was in good financial shape, Jones told of plans to have one troop in place of the former two. It will be the Niles Troop. Jones voiced his expectations of a harmonious year, with an entirely new set-up, including committeemen, leaders, and so on. An advisory board, headed by Dr. E. C. Grau has been named. George Bonde and R. Blacow will assist him. The advisory group will select the five scout committeemen from the chamber membership.

With Monday designated as the day for the "kick off" meet, at the beginning of the annual drive for scout funds, the civic group discussed means of collecting this year, and named officials.

E. Dixon Bristow, will be general chairman of the Niles district. Each organization and enterprise in the town will name a captain, who will contact members, or workers, in his group. This plan was adopted to obviate the old house-to-house canvass method.

Judge J. A. Silva, new scout district chairman for Washington township, explained the new canvass method. He lauded E. Dixon Bristow, last year's chairman and stated his satisfaction upon Bristow's appointment as head of the district drive this year.

E. E. Glassbrook was named captain for the chamber. His assistants will be H. L. Scott, Joe Gomes and Harvey Braun.

H. L. Scott, baseball committeeman, told of the start of the season's play by the Niles team, which will play independent ball this time. Funds left from last season amount to $37.49, Scott said. Joe Gomes, school trustee, told the civic group that a grandstand, rest rooms and drinking fountains will be put up at the school diamond, for accommodation of the Sunday crowds. Gomes added that damage and nuisances will not be tolerated this year.

Speaking in his capacity as road master, Gomes told the chamber that he will be forced to suspend street cleaning on Niles First street. He said that it has become a state duty, and that county funds will no longer be available. An effort will be made to have the state take over the task. Jones thanked Gomes for his service to the town.

At the start of the meet, a note of formal thanks from the Centerville Lions Club was read, stating that body's appreciation of aid given by Niles toward the success of the Township fair.

PEACE DISTURBER GETS 90 DAYS SENTENCE

His lack of a sense of humor apparently led Jesus Guiterrez, of Decoto, through a series of incidents Saturday that wound up in the Niles justice court and subsequently in the county jail.

It seems that Guiterrez, riding his bicycle near Decoto Saturday morning, resented the jibes of several cannery workers who passed by in a car, and followed them to the Pearce cannery, where he is alleged to have made a scene. He was ejected, but returned in a few moments with a hammer to get his revenge. He was ejected again, only to return with a hatchet, demanding that his annoyers come out. Constable O. W. Ebright was summoned and took the would-be tomahawker into custody.

He was charged with disturbing the peace and hailed before Judge Silva Monday morning. He pleaded guilty and was bundled off to the county joil far 90 days. The stiff sentence was forthcoming in view of the fact that Guiterrez was jailed on a similar charge last year.

Twenty-six Tables At Benefit Whist Friday

The benefit whist party, held at the home of Mrs. Ida Moise, on Second street, Niles, Friday evening, was a great success, according to word received Monday.

There were twenty-six tables at the affair, which was given for the benefit of the Corpus Christi church, Niles.

Among the ardent workers for the success of the party were: Mrs. A. Silva, Ben Murphy and Mrs. Scott.

WORKMEN'S HOUSE ON NEAR-BY FARM IS LOOTED FRIDAY

Robbery Second In Three Months; Clothing, Watch, Stolen

Robbery of one of the houses of Chinese workmen on the Shinn ranch, was reported to local authorities Monday morning by Sam Lee, worker. The theft occured Friday afternoon, when the house was left unoccupied for a time.

According to Lee, the thieves entered by way of a window, which they forced open, sometime between 1:30 and 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. A watch, clothing, silks and a small amount of food was taken. A watchman at a nearby fruit dryer stated that he had seen no one about the premises during the afternoon.

The theft is the second within a period of three months, Lee declared. Groceries, bedding and clothing valued at more than $100 were the loot last time.

It is thought that the thieves are familiar with the hours during which the houses are unoccupied, and await their chance to enter undetected. That the robberies are the work of men, and not urchins, is evidenced by the means of entry, which necessitated a high leap.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Braun and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Kirk have returned to Niles following an extended motor trip throughout the Rockies. They visited Yellowstone park and other places of interest.

Broken Engagements

CAMILLA came running into the house where her fragile little aunt sat alone in a sunny window, her fingers busy with some dainty needlework. Agatha Andrews lifted her quiet gray eyes and saw the dark sparkling beauty of the girl.

"Auntie, I've had a darling time!" cried Camilla breathlessly whirling into a chair. "Guess who was there—and I met him!" she ended ecstatically.

Agatha Andrews turned her fair face and looked out into the flower garden which seemed to waver uncertainly before her hurt eyes; all the blossoms seemed to nod their heads and say, "I told you so—I told you so—some day—"

"You are not listening!" reproached the girl, for this aunt was mother and father to her and had been for many years since a fatal accident had deprived the child of both parents. "You haven't heard a word—I met such an important person at the garden party—we made heaps of money for the hospital—and he looked and looked at me until he seemed to realize that he was being rude; then Andy introduced him to me! Auntie, I have made a real conquest!"

"Goose," smiled Agatha.

"Behold—the governor's future lady—"

"Camilla!" Miss Andrews had risen and was staring at her niece with wide, startled eyes in her white face. "What do you mean?"

"Nothing but my foolishness, dear," explained Camilla contritely. "I really did meet the governor himself and he was charming to me. He is coming to call tomorrow afternoon and we must have tea in the garden."

"Of course—" faltered Agatha.

"He asked after you, auntie, said he knew you years ago, when you were my age; he said there was a resemblance. Andy was frightfully jealous of him. Isn't he distinguished looking, and so calm and reserved with the twinkly look in his blue eyes. I adore him!"

"You mustn't hurt Andy's feelings, Camilla," advised Agatha.

"He seems so young and immature beside Governor Frayne. I told him so," she ended frankly.

"Told—Andy?"

"Yes," carelessly "on the way home. He was quite like a bear about it—so we are no longer engaged!"

"Oh!" cried the older woman sharply; then, as if collecting her scattered forces, she added quietly, "I am sorry, dear. Andy is young, but that is a fault we all get over some day!"

Camilla laughed and kissed her warmly, but the slim finger where Andy's diamond had proudly gleamed was quite bare.

The next afternoon Camilla made preparations for serving tea in the rose-bowered veranda. Miss Andrews had silently helped her, making a loaf of very special pound cake that her mother used to bake. She gave the girl carte blanche where the china closet was concerned, Agatha, dressed in a soft gray silk, with her graying hair pinned in a knot at her neck, looked like some pompadour figurine as she wandered restlessly about the garden. It was not until she heard voices at the house that she slowly went back to face the past.

There was Andy McDonald, stubbornly faithful in spite of his broken engagement, playing with Camilla's cat; and there was Camilla, radiating glorious youth, her dark bobbed hair blowing in the sweet evening breezes, her awed eyes lifted to Gilbert Frayne's face.

"Here she is at last;" cried Camilla, and the governor whirled around to stare for a moment at the slim figure coming slowly across the grass. The tea kettle bubbled furiously just then, and Andy and Camilla flew to subdue it, the governor went to meet Agatha, his blue eyes keen like a boy's.

"Agatha," he said simply as he took her hand in his, "you told me once upon a time to go away—you never wanted to see me again—"

"Yes," gasped Agatha faintly, her eyes seeking her refuge, the garden. "But one says so many foolish things—"

"Yes—and they hurt all through the years. What a young fool I was in those days not to come back to you."

"Yes," agreed Agatha softly.

"There is such a lot to explain—when I saw the child yesterday I was fascinated; I told myself it was either your daughter or a near relative—so—I—came."

"I am—glad—you have been so successful," said Agatha, regaining her poise somewhat.

"Yes—in a measure," he said patiently, "but I came to find out today whether I shall be the only bachelor governor the state has ever known or—"

* * * * * * *

"They have gone into the rose garden," said Camilla indignantly.

"Why not? They were engaged to be married and quarreled twenty years ago—great scott, he's kissing your Aunt Agatha!" Andy turned his head away from the rose garden and encountered Camilla's brimming eyes.

"Where's—my ring?" she asked

Etienne Brule May Have Been First in Michigan

That Nicolet actually touched Michigan in 1634 is beyond doubt, but there remains a more or less discredited claim that another man preceded Nicolet.

He was Etienne Brule, accompanied on many of his trips by Grenolle, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Virtually the only evidence which gives Brule the honor of first stepping into Michigan is his own story to Sagard, the Recollect, that he did so in 1618, or possibly in 1612.

Sagard's story from Brule would make Brule the first white man to have touched Lake Superior as well. But Brule's story, which quite probably never will be definitely proved or disproved, is open to doubt because he went or was supposed to have gone, to many other places.

Likewise the Indians cannot be as good witnesses for him as they were for friendly Nicolet.

Brule's fate, they say, was in 1642, when, after several narrow escapes, the Hurons could not stomach having him forever trying to seduce the squaws, so they boiled him in oil and ate him.

Turtles Menace to Wild Life

As study of the food habits of the snapping turtle becomes more extended plenty of evidence is uncovered substantiating the belief that this turtle is a menace to fish life of the waters it inhabits as well as to the young of aquatic birds and animals. Snapping turtles killed in spring usually show that they have dined well on the spawn of all kinds of game fish and not infrequently their stomachs contain fingerling bass, bluegills, perch and other fish species. They have been known to grab young wild ducks by the leg, draw them under water and devour them at their leisure. In fact, they will take anything that swims and looks like food. Lakes infested with snapping turtles as a rule are poor fishing waters.

The Lia Fail

The Lia Fail, or Stone of Destiny, is the name of the famous Stone of Scone, seated on which the ancient Scottish kings were crowned. According to tradition it formerly was the pillow used by the patriarch Jacob, and possibly was brought to Scotland after the Crusades. It was kept in the Abbey church of Scone and in 1296 was removed by Edward I to England and is at present under the coronation chair in Westminster abbey.

"Straining at Gnats"

This expression is to be found in the Bible, 23d chapter of Matthew, from the 23d and 24th verses. The expression is in common use, indicating a tendency to examine critically small details, but to overlook or pass casually by major offenses. —Literary Digest.

The Girl They Didn't Forget

By MARGARET B. TOMSON

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

JACK WESTON, once heralded as "America's Playboy," before alimony and the stock market debacle had almost sunk him, turned with swift apologies to the well-built stranger standing beside him at the bar, whom he had just jostled with unwitting rudeness.

"Don't mention it," said Dick Bode, former All-American tackle, magnanimously.

Weston hesitated a moment, then spurred by the desire to confide in some one went on: "I was looking at that girl who just came in . . . the tall, dark one . . . she looks so much like a girl I used to know in Los Angeles that it startled me."

Bode's eyes turned in the direction indicated by Weston's eyes. "That's funny," he allowed musingly. "I knew a girl in Los Angeles who looked like her, too. Yes," he decided, craning his neck, "she does look like Nancy."

'Not Nancy Ross."

"You know Nancy?" the voice was eager.

"Know her?" murmured Weston reminiscently, "I should say I did. The best pal I ever had. Swell gal."

"Swell gal!" echoed Bode warmly. Solemnly they drank to Nancy.

"What a coincidence," Weston shook his head in wonderment.

They toasted the girl they hadn't forgotten with another round.

"Never forget what she did for me one time," Weston remembered rather maudlinly. "Pulled me through one of the worst cases of delirium tremens."

"Funny," said Bode suspiciously. "She hated that kind of thing. Only time she saw me awfully crocked, she bawled h—l out of me."

"She certainly was a swell little playmate," Weston confided. "Never got crocked, never got quarrelsome, always ready to go places."

"Oh, I never found her that way," objected Bode. "Liked to go out, of course, but we used to go in for sports a lot."

"Athletic!" Weston was incredulous. "Why, the only exercise she ever went in for was dancing until the orchestra quit."

There was a suspicious moisture in Weston's eyes. He certainly hadn't played square with Nancy. She had been awfully in love with him, too, and he had really intended to marry her. Then that blond had suddenly walked into his life.

Remorsefully Bode surveyed his empty glass. What a beast he had been to Nancy. Met her when he was just out of college and flat broke. Probably wouldn't have eaten for weeks at a time if it hadn't been for Nancy. She was always doing something for him. Of course she was terribly in love with him and he had asked her to marry him but that was no excuse for a man to sponge off a woman, he realized now.

The end came when he had an unexpected offer of a job in Chicago. He left in a rush, meant to write her but just carelessly put it off so long that he was finally ashamed to write. How could he have been fool enough not to realize that she had been the one and only woman in his life? It would be all right now, though. He'd go back and marry her and make up to her for all the tears she must have shed for him.

"My Nancy!" whispered Weston reverentially and a little tearful.

"My Nancy!" Bode challenged with sudden belligerence.

Just then Weston's fist connected with Bode's nose and the battle was on.

"Nice places you take your wife to," sniffed Nancy Elliott loftily to her husband after watching two belligerent gentlemen being shoved unceremoniously through the door.

There was a mischievous glint in Nancy's eyes: "I think I used to know those two pugilists."

"Undoubtedly," groaned her husband. "Your list of scalps extended the length of the continent before I finally tamed you by sheer brute force."

"I didn't mind so much your knocking my teeth out," she said reminiscently, "but when you sliced my ears off . . . well, I've just practically never looked at a man since!"

"I was a weakling in those days," he said sadly. "That was before I learned to treat my women rough. Anyway, I still think it was positively immoral the way you got yourself engaged every time you powdered your nose."

"Not at all," she denied stoutly. "I practically never became engaged to anybody who didn't need my moral support at that particular time."

"Don't tell me you were engaged to those two birds," he begged.

"I don't remember," Nancy thought deeply. "Yes . . . yes, I was," she remembered suddenly. "I got out of it all right," she assured him happily. "I introduced Jack to a man-eating blond I dug up somewhere. That was very simple.

"Dick was a little more difficult, though. I finally maneuvered it so that he got a job way, far away. However," her eyes widened pensively. "I had to become engaged to two other chaps to put that one over!"

Glassware History Dates From Ancient Egyptians

It is a far cry from the gourds and crude clay vessels of the distant past to the beautiful glass work of the Venetians, the Swedish, and the English of today, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. During the First century, A. D., the Egyptians began to mold glass-vessels that were muddy in texture, fragile, and anything but uniform in shape, but that were widely used in their own country. They passed on their rather crude craftsmanship to the Romans, with the expansion of the empire, and it was from Rome that the Venetians learned the trade. Venice, however, lifted glass making into the realm of the arts and has never to this day been surpassed in the craft. So jealously did she guard the secrets of the exquisite, roseate-hued bubbles that for centuries no glass blower was allowed to leave the country and hence the other European nations could not learn her formulae. Venetian craftsmen were held virtual prisoners on the Island of Murano.

But about the middle of the Sixteenth century the ban was raised and they were allowed to travel in England, Spain, France, and Flanders. Their fame had preceded them, and everywhere they were hailed with enthusiasm. Some of the glassmakers joined factories in the places they visited, while others started concerns of their own.

Dominion of Canada So Named to Please U. S.

In the first drafts of the British North America act the title of the new confederation was "Kingdom of Canada," and this was the proposal of Sir John Macdonald and other Canadian leaders. This name was opposed by the British foreign secretary, Lord Stanley, as being likely to offend the susceptibilities of the United States, according to a writer in the Detroit News. Finally the name "Dominion" was suggested to a conference of delegates, the inspiration having come from a verse in the Bible (Psalm 72, verse 9 or Zechariah 9, verse 10).

Authorities differ on the origin of the name "Canada." Charlevoix explained that an Iroquois word "kanata" meant "collection of huts" and was mistaken by early explorers for the name of the country. Father Hennepin said that the Spaniards on landing were disappointed with the country and expressed their feelings by calling it "Il capa di nada," meaning "Cape Nothing." A similar story is told with regard to the Portuguese who explored the St. Lawrence. Another Indian derivation is from "Kan" for mouth and "ada" for river, originally the country at the mouth of the St. Lawrence.

The word manufacturing means making by hand; nothing could bring out more concisely than the word itself the distance traveled since manufacturing began.

Far Fields

By LEETE STONE

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THEY were companions, and they spoke to each other; each in the fashion; from their separate cages. One was a trusty in a penitentiary, and the other was a golden canary. The lilting song of the bird and the crisp whistle of the man exchanged daily greetings across the straggling space that separated them.

This was one of the first days of spring.

Number 991 pressed his cheekbones against the bars of his open window. Even the metal felt less cold and unyielding than usual. Zephyrs stirred his sandy hair which had become much thinner during the ten years of incarceration. This morning out of the ruts of resignation which had claimed his spirit from the first rose a consuming desire for the far fields of freedom and the nomad life that had once been his.

Eyes bent on his little chum whose cage hung in another open window over the way this wondrous April day, Number 991 indulged his whimsicality of guarded conversation: "Can we stick another winter here, little one?" he whispered.

Notes of song trilled over to him as if in direct answer.

"Meaning 'Cheerio' and 'Carry on' and all the rest of the uplift stuff," "Number 991 muttered with a wry mouth.

About to turn away from the window, his gaze—which had been riveted on the cage—was caught by the sight of a child scrambling onto a chair which stood beneath it. The child was small and had trouble making the grade; but finally stood on the chair and commenced fussing with the tiny door of the bird's prison. At once a woman appeared on the scene, removed the child with apparent scoldings and pushing the chair away.

The significance of this ordinary incident flooded the man's mind with the conviction that some day the child would succeed with its mischief and his little companion would escape to those far fields of freedom that nagged their hearts perpetually.

Thus the idea of escape was born in Number 991 on this day of lovely promise which had suddenly new meaning to him. Amazed, and somewhat bewildered, he for the first time realized how many oportunities he had missed; wrapped as he had been during the years in the dull inertia of confinement and prison shop labor. The check-up of tools was often lax. It would be simple to confiscate and conceal files and oil. Nights were long in which to softly sever his bars.

He felt that escape for the little pal was destined. Why not for him, too?

The chance to secure tools came soon and Number 991 became a different man. He stepped out of the prison rut of resignation into the province of love of life. A thousand sleepless nights had taught him where the night guard of his cell-block would be at any given moment. No detail of secrecy eluded him. Night by night the four little rifts in two of his bars grew imperceptibly deeper.

Intimacy, also, progressed between the bird and the man. Never a morning that they did not exchange buoyancies:

"How you coming, friend?" Carrolled over.

"Fine! How 'bout you, little one?" Whistled back.

The morning came when all but the last few strokes of the file had been taken. A few more deft moments' work would spell separation of the steel and—escape! Watching the bird across the way, the man's body stiffened suddenly and his cheekbones pressed the bars so closely that he feared they might give way.

The child was dragging the chair under the canary's cage again. Today! The child climbed on the chair; fussed with the cage door, and opened it. The golden bird winged swift flight through the open window, and downward, beyond the man's impetuous gaze that strove to follow.

Number 991's joy mounted to the peak of elation. The little pal was free to travel the far fields—travel with him—to indulge fantasy.

Number 991 remained long at the window planning his own escape for that very night. He dreamed as he sniffed the blossom-scented air hungrily. Then he noticed the little boy; shoulder drooped in penitence; going out of the house opposite and disappear around the corner.

But why did the child return running followed closely by a sleek black cat, and carrying something in small, cupped hands as he screamed for his mother. Number 991's eyes strained to see! They caught a glimpse of a lifeless little blob of yellow from which the feathers drooped awry.

Number 991 turned away from his nearly severed bars, despair in the deep lines of his sagging face. With a watchful look everywhere first, he flung the tiny files through his bars and they disappeared in the tall grass of prison acres just as the morning shop bell clanged through the corridors. Far fields indeed!

Seven Man-Made Wonders Known to Ancient World

The seven man-made wonders of the ancient tradition were these:

The pyramids of Egypt and the sphinx.

The hanging gardens of Babylon.

The temple of Diana at Ephesus, in Asia Minor.

The statue of Jupiter at Olympus, in the valley of Olympia in southwestern Greece.

The tomb of Mausolous at Halicarnassus, in Asia Minor.

The pharos or lighthouse of Alexandria.

The colossus of Rhodes, a brass statue of the sun god Apollo.

Of the seven wonders, the only satisfactory survival is the first group, the pyramids and the great sphinx. The foundation and many fragments of the mausoleum have been disclosed by modern excavation; the structure was destroyed by an earthquake. Mounds indicating the position of the walls and gardens of Babylon have also been identified.

The colossus, composed of brass cast in pieces, was overthrown by an earthquake in 224 B. C. The pieces lay there for many centuries, until the Turks took Rhodes. They sold the brass to a merchant, who is said to have employed 900 camels to carry it away.

The temple of Diana was burned in 356 B. C. by Erostartus, an obscure individual who thought thus to make himself famous. It was rebuilt in a less pretentious manner and survived until the coming of the Goths in 256 A. D. Barbarian invaders are thought to have destroyed also the Olympian Jove and the pharos of Alexandria.

FIREMEN FIGHT TWO FIRES IN CITY SATURDAY

Said to have started from a shorted radio set, a serious fire called the Centerville firemen to the A. Lewis place near Centerville at 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

The blaze was in one of the workmen's houses on the property, which is situated on the old high school site. Assistant chief Frank Madruga said that it was necessary to use both engines to subdue the flames, and keep them from spreading to surrounding buildings. He estimated the damage at around $250.

Another blaze, this time a minor one, routed out the firemen later the same day, when an alarm was turned in from the M. F. George property in the north section of the town. Several packing boxes caught fire. They were quickly extinguished.

Washington high's huskers will test their strength for the first time Saturday afternoon, when they meet the Alumni eleven on the high school field. The game is scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock.

With a veteran team back in harness this year, coach Jess Regli states that the time to topple the Alumni has come. His line averages 182 pounds and his backfield 161. The latter is alert and fast.

Regli stated that his starting lineup will probably be: center, Manuel; guards, Hikedo and Dinsmore; tackles, Sinclair and Phippen; ends, Amaral and Silva; quarter, Boyce; halfs, Muniz and Rose, and full, Madierios.

The Aumni, under the tutelage of Lawrence Pine, will present a formidable array of former stars, Red Blacow, who has coached the alumni during past years, will be unable to do so this time. Pine however, is capable, and an excellent back himself. The alumni will have only two short practice sessions, one last night, and one tomorrow evening at the high school gymnasium.

The tentative starting lineup for the alumni: center, Cull; guards, Wilson and Logan; tackles, Teeter and Joliff; ends, Mederios and Aust; quarter, Raso; half, C. Pine; full, Cahill.

Others who will see action on the alumni squad are: Booras, Trout, Pond, Bernard, Coley, Kerns, Soito, Garcia, Fontes, Gularte and any others who appear for the game.

Congregational Church News

"Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread," will be the subject of the pastor's address Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. He will elaborate on the thought that many times our petitions to God are really not expected by us to be answered. The scripture will be "The Lord's Prayer."

Both Sunday School and Christian Endeavor have shown the expected increase in numbers since school began. Last week two Sunday School parties were held, and the children were entertained royally.

Friday night, September 21, the Christian Endeavor will hold its first party of the new school year. The place is the Ellsworth home. The time is seven o'clock. The conditions are:—(and these conditions are important) every one must wear his very oldest and least wanted clothing; especially, the shoes must be old; each member should invite at least one new person, and see that the new person gets to the right place at the right time; and, finally, bring flashlights. You will need flashlights to guide you through the maize of trees and shrubs and buildings you will find it necessary to penetrate in order to find the treasure. For we are going on a treasure hunt! The prize? That you must seek.

The Bible Theatre on the Air offers this Sunday the story of the man who built his house upon the sand of greediness, so when the winds of reality blew, his shoddy structure was destroyed. The title is "Crumbling Sands," and an attempt will be made to truly portray the essence of Jesus parable. As in our play of last week, it should not be difficult to apply the dramatization to our present day. The people of the play as you will first hear them are: Ishman, a merchant, Wesley Dexter Gordon; Merabina, his sister-in-law, Anna Millicent Shinn; Ruth, the daughter of Merabina, Irma Hodges; Alazer, the husband of Merabina, Ted Dundus; and Joseph, a servant to Ishman, Jack Townsend.

Rain Tree Based on Truth

One black mark has been partly erased from the records of the early explorers who told the tale of the "rain tree" which supplied water for the entire island on which it grew. Scientists have discovered that at one time an enormous tree grew on the uplands of the island of Ferro, in the Canaries, and was probably responsible for the story. The uplands on this island are about 3,000 feet above sea level and so are often covered with clouds. Because of the dense foliage this tree must have had it is thought it would have been possible for it to gather enough moisture from the passing clouds to cause considerable water to drip from the leaves. Such dripping is probably what sowed the seed from which the story grew.—Pathfinder Magazine.

MINER TELLS OF EXPERIENCE IN SIERRA

Back from his gold claims in the high Sierras, H. B. Rathbun, Niles fire commissioner, has interesting information about the huge number of gold-seekers thronging the diggings.

Rathbun, whose claims are in the vicinity of St. Louis, over 8000 feet high, has abandoned his work for the winter. During the time of heavy snow he will live at his home at Fairfax. He plans to return to the gold fields in March.

The miner tells of the thousands of yeople along the streams in the Sierras, most of them getting about 25 cents per day. He said that the charity problem is acute, many of the families on the verge of starvation. Experienced miners, he said, are doing very well.

Kinds of Poem Favored

Our English tongue has always favored two particular kinds of short poem, the single cry and the dancing narrative, the lyric and the ballad.

Strength of a Bee

A bee can lift and carry 25.5 times its own weight, whereas a man's limit of weight is about equal to himself.

Love Animal Toys

In all ages of the world's history children have loved their toys to be in the shape of animals.

LESSONS SUSPENDED BY POPULAR NILES MUSIC TEACHER

Announcing that she will henceforth devote her time to assisting her husband in his growing business, Mrs. Marguerite Crane, popular Niles music teacher, last week notified her pupils that lessons will be indefinitely suspended.

Mrs. Crane declared that her pupils will be turned over to a competent instructor from the Oakland conservatory of music, whom she recommends highly. Mrs. Crane has taught in this district for more than nine years. During that time she has taught innumerable children the foundations of music, and trained a number of outstanding local musicians.

Her Rythm band, started two years ago, and popular in Niles, may disband, Mrs. Crane said.

Enoch Arden

As the name implies, it is a case similar to that described in Tennyson's poem, in which a husband disappears and remains away for a long time, then returns to find his wife married to another in place of the supposedly dead husband. In Tennyson's "Enoch Arden," the returned sailor goes away without revealing himself and dies of a broken heart. A similar story but with a different ending is found in a poem "Homeward Bound" by Adelaide A. Proctor. Certain states, such as New York, have had what are called "Enoch Arden laws," providing for the dissolution of a marriage where the husband or wife has been absent for five years and is believed dead by the remaining partner.

Depression Hits Santa Monica PELICANS

There's a story that comes out of Southern California. It's about the pelicans of Santa Monica Bay and these pelicans remind us of a lot of us human beings. The experience teaches us that more and better sales effort is required of every last one of us.

For years these pelicans had been fed by fishermen from their surplus catch, until they got the habit of eating without work.

This year high seas changing currents off Santa Monica cut down the catch, and fishermen no longer had any fish to spare. They noticed that the pelicans languished and grew thin and it dawned on them that they had forgotten how to fish for themselves. So they went down the coast and found some unpampered pelicans who had never been ruined by easy living and free fish. They turned them loose among the starving birds, who sat about on the beach and complained of hard times.

The way those imported pelicans went out after their own fish was an eye-opener. Pretty soon the hungry natives quit watching and tried it themselves. They discovered there are plenty of fish in the sea for the bird with energy and enterprise. And they've quit talking about the hard times."

Above Waves at Night, Disappears by Morning

There have been fabled lands—such as the lost continent of Atlantis—reported to have vanished beneath the seas, but in the Island of Gotland, in the Baltic sea, there is a land storied to have appeared above the waves each night, only to disappear every morning, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

Naturally, since the island is now a permanent fixture, it must have stayed put one fine morning. But let the ancient saga tell the story:

"And in the days before our fathers were born, their fathers beheld, at each day's setting of the sun a fair island floating on the misty waves of the Ostersjon. Through all the night it could be dimly seen resting on the water, but at each rising of the sun it disappeared beneath the sea. None dared venture upon it, albeit the wise men said that if a fire but be kindled upon it the land would become fixed. So, being without fear, Thjelvar took his men in his ship and before dawn landed on the floating island and kindled a fire, and behold the island became fixed and there has remained until this day."

Want proof? There's the island, and the map shows "Thjelvarik bay and near it a heap of stones that any one will tell you is Thjelvar's grave."

No place in the world is richer in legends and traditions and in relics and memorials to support the stories than is the Island of Gotland. That it may likely have been below the surface of the sea for several different periods is now admitted by geologists who have studied the region.

William C. Nicholls To Lecture Here Tomorrow

William C. Nicholls, author and lecturer on musical subjects and director of the Oakland Conservatory of Music, will lecture in the auditorium of the Niles school Friday morning, September 21, at 9:30 a. m. This lecture is open to the public.

Among the subjects to be discussed will be the fundamentals of piano training for children, the responsibility of parents in connection with the child's musical education, and other topics of special interest to parents.

Nicholls has been lecturing throughout the state at various schools and colleges. His recent work on "Teaching Principles" is in use in eastern colleges, and in the public schools of some cities in California.

SINCLAIR BACKED BY SECRETARY OF WAR DERN IN TALK

Secretary of War Dern this week added his unqualified endorsement of Upton Sinclair's candidacy for governor of California, bringing another important aid to the noted author by members of President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Dern said, "If Upton Sinclair is elected, it will mean that the people of California are ready for a progressive government. If he is not, it will mean that they are not ready."

Previously, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Postmaster General Farley, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and other New Deal officials have indicated support of Sinclair.

Giants Have Disorder

Doctors know that a giant is a giant because of a glandular disorder, but they have yet to prove whether "Everybody loves a fat man" or "Nobody loves a fat man" is right. They say that a fat man couldn't get so fat if he were jumpy and irritable, so probably the first is correct. A fat man's glands are maladjusted, too, and normalcy is therefore just luck and not very certain.

MANY 1ST PRIZES AWARDED COUNTY FOR FLOWERS

Out of seventeen floral entries from Alameda county in the State Fair competition, fifteen were awarded first prizes, according to B. E. Amyx, in charge of the county display this year

Two more firsts, or seventeen, would have been an all-time record, Amyx said. The dahlia prize, which many thought should have been awarded to this county, went to Santa Cruz county, which displayed a greater number of varieties.

It is Amyx's plan, if appointed again next year, to create a wider interest in this district, and have a greater number of blooms from Washington township.

Among second prizes awarded at the fair was one to the Rhier vineyards at Mission San Jose for Burgundy.

NIMRODS BAG DEER AS SEASON WANES LAST WEEK-END

Niles deer hunters brought the season to a close over last week-end with a successful flurry. Hunters who bagged their bucks are: Tony Alves, with two, one 90 and one 100 pounds; O. W. Ebright brought down an 88 pounder; Fred Mosegaard came in with the largest buck of the season. It tipped the beat at 116 pounds. John Mendoza, in the same party with Mosegaard got a buck weighing 93 pounds; Tony Silva got an 89 pound three point buck. Charles Mendoza and Lester Murphy were unsuccessful.

The total weight of the deer dressed this season at the Berchem market was 1906 pounds, an average of 90 and one-half pounds per animal.

HUNTERS URGED TO HEED NEW FEDERAL LAW

Duck and other migratory bird hunters in Washington township are urged to acquaint themselves with new federal laws in connection with hunting, to go into effect this season.

In an effort to restore the fast-diminishing numbers of migratory birds in the United States, the federal government will obtain funds through the sale of stamps, which must be affixed to the license of each hunter. The funds derived from said sale will go for the purchase of water areas and marshes, for sanctuary to the migrating fowl.

Although below the minimum population listing for the sale of the stamps, Niles has received an allotment because of its importance in a duck hunting area. Postmaster H. V. Fournier has them on sale at the Niles Post Office.

Every hunter over sixteen years of age must have the stamp attached to his license. The penalty for violation is $500 fine.

Hunters in this area may apply at the Niles post office, Fournier said.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Alaimo, of Niles, are back at their cleaning and dying business after a week's vacation at Santa Cruz.

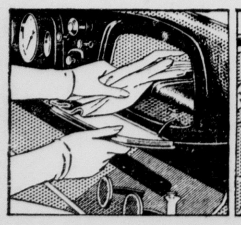
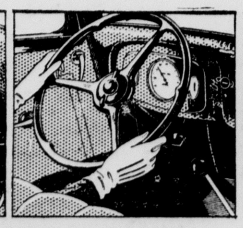
"A Woman must have had a hand in styling the new FORD V-8"



● A handy compartment for gloves and purse.



● A steering ratio that makes parking decidedly easy.

● Plenty of body, head, and leg room in the rear seat.

THE fact is, many women did. For this new Ford car was definitely planned to meet the needs of women as well as men.

That's why you'll find a special compartment for your purse in the dashboard and sun-visors for your eyes. That's why interior fittings have been so tastefully designed. Why a finer grade of upholstery has been used. Why brakes act on the slightest touch of your toe. Why the steering ratio is 15-to-1 in order to make this car easier for a woman to handle.

And remember, the Ford V-8 has all the safety features modern engineering skill can devise—a V-8 Engine, Torque-tube Drive, All Steel Body, Welded Steel Spoke Wheels, Safety Glass and many others.

Remember, too, that the Ford V-8 is the most economical car to operate Ford has ever built. Not only that—Ford V-8 delivered prices are decidedly low.
